Greetings,

I am writing concerning the current proposed Settlement with Microsoft for its flagrant anti trust violations. The current settlement is completely unacceptable. Not only are they not being held responsible for enough money in damages they have caused to the many companies they have hurt or destroyed wielding there monopolistic powers. There is nothing put in place to prevent them from doing it again. Since the swearing in of President Bush they have already relaxed and gone back to there old ways. I have been in the computer industry since I was 14 years old (now 25) and seen there damage over the years. I truly believe they need something as strict as the AT&T breakup to really open up competition in the operating system and software industries. This will be the only way a computer maker could put a OS on there machine other than Windows without fear of repercussions from Microsoft. I urge you do not settle like this. Do something that will actually make a difference. If you don't in another 5-10 years it will just be back again to haunt you.

Sincerely,

Roy James Milican
